Howie Dorough

My name is Howard Dwaine Dorough, also known as Howie D. I was born on August 22nd, 1973, in Orlando, Florida. I'm a singer, composer, actor and businessman, famous worldwide for being one of the founding members of the Backstreet Boys, one of the best-selling pop bands in history.

I'm the youngest of five children, son of Hoke Dwaine Dorough (with Irish roots) and Paula Flores (Puerto Rican). My interest in the showbusiness started when I was three years old singing and playing a small guitar. At six years old, I made my acting debut in a "Wizard of Oz" adaptation and sang regularly in my church choir. My mom signed me up for plays like "The Sound of Music" and "Camelot". I also took formal singing, acting and dancing classes, including classic ballet, tap and jazz. I had minor roles in cinema and television, including an uncredited paper in the movie "Parenthood" (1989).

In the early 1990s, I met AJ McLean and Nick Carter in Orlando. In 1993, along with Kevin Richardson and Brian Littrell, we officially formed the Backstreet Boys. After signing with Jive Records and gaining immense initial popularity in Europe, we became a global phenomenon in the late 1990s and early 2000s. With hits like "I Want It That Way" and "Everybody (Backstreet's Back)", we sold more than 130 million records worldwide.

In 1998, after the tragic passing of my sister Caroline because of lupus, I founded the Dorough Lupus Foundation. Its goal is raising funds for the investigation of this disease and giving financial assistance to patients who can't afford to pay for their treatments. In 2007, I married Leigh Boniello, who I met in 2000 when she worked as the Backstreet Boys' web master. We have two children, James Hoke Dorough and Holden John Dorough.

After my prolonged trajectory with the band, I've explored different musical projects like "Back to Me", my solo debut album released in 2011 with singles like "100" and "Lie to Me", which led to me being the opening act for Britney Spears on her South American tour, and "Which One Am I?", an album released in 2019 inspired by my own childhood experiences and challenges. This led to a stage musical called "Howie D: Back in the Day", premiered in Omaha, Nebraska.

I also cofounded Sweet D, Inc. with my brother John, a real estate development and consulting firm responsible for building condominiums, hotels, and waterfront complexes in Florida.
